Trekking day in Argentina

A day on foot in the Sierras de Córdoba: woodland scented with wild herbs, streams crossed on stepping stones, granite outcrops and viewpoints looking out to the city.

Argentina 1 day From €120 per person

The tour

This trekking day takes you into the Sierras de Córdoba, a region of rolling hills and valleys about an hour and a half by bus from the city. The trail runs through the 'bosque serrano', a native woodland fragrant with peperina and poleo, two local herbs, then winds between ancient granite formations and crosses streams on stepping stones.

The climb is gradual, up to the 'miradores', viewpoints that look out over the hills and often as far as Córdoba. Lunch is in a shady spot by a stream or overlooking the landscape, with an eye out for local birds and plants.

The trek suits all fitness levels, from keen beginners to seasoned walkers, and is open to adults from 18. It is a chance to switch off from everyday life, with nothing but the wind for company.

What makes it different

- The bosque serrano and its aromatic herbs
- Lunch by the water
- Viewpoints looking out to Córdoba
- A trek suited to all levels

Day by day

Morning: setting off

About an hour and a half by bus to the meeting point, then the walk begins in the cool morning air under the trees. Streams crossed on stepping stones and a gradual climb to the first viewpoints.

Midday: lunch in the open

A lunch stop in a shady spot, beside a stream or at a viewpoint.

Afternoon: granite, rivers and the way back

Through the granite formations, with an optional scramble up to a lookout, a break to cool your feet in the water, then the return after a full day in the sierras.
