About the environmental education program

Bali is well known for its astonishing beauty and greenery. However, rapid development and the rise in tourism have led to many negative consequences for the local environment. Plastic water bottles and plastic food wrappers are a major concern, often discarded on the ground, as food in Bali was traditionally wrapped in biodegradable banana leaves.

The environmental education program focuses on primary schools in Bali. While education serves as the foundation, participants are encouraged to work together and contribute, highlighting the importance of every small effort in making a difference.
